

THE COSMOLOGICAL IMAGINATION

Dancing the Universe's Dream

Brian Thomas Swimme in conversation with Lauren Artress

In the hush of Chartres, where stone and starlight speak across centuries, we enter the cosmological imagination - the deep, evolutionary field where the universe becomes aware of itself through our human journey.

Here, the cosmos is not a distant expanse but a living, self-creating process, rising from within at every moment.

Our dreams, intuitions, and inner symbols emerge from the same generative ground that births galaxies.

To walk into this dimension is to feel the universe's longing moving through our own lives, calling us into greater creativity, responsibility, and awe.

These seminars invite us to recognise ourselves as co-creators in an ever-unfolding cosmos, tuning our hearts to the sacred reciprocity at the centre of cosmogenesis.
